HANNAH AGAIN ADMITS KIDNAPING OF HORST BOY; STORY IGNORED

"Modern Ananias" Has Exonerated Arthur
Arnold

WOOSTER, O., Feb. 24.—Having assumed the role of a modern Ananias, Charles Hannah, the man of many "confessions" and the central figure in the sensational Melvin Horst case, early today again changed his story and admitted that he was alone responsible for the kidnaping of the 4-year-old Orrville boy more than a year ago.

Hannah made several small changes in his latest story and these tended to clear Arthur Arnold, whom Hannah, at one time, named as a co-conspirator. He also again exonerated the two alleged Akron bootleggers, who were arrested last week.

Authorities say, however, that they are uninterested in any further "confessions" or repudiations from the man, but that their paramount object is some word or clue which will lead them to the body of the little boy.

Hannah, in company with county officials, left the Wayne County jail a short time yesterday, but it could not be learned where he was taken by authorities.

The trip was a short respite from the continuous 30-hour grilling which Hannah underwent Saturday night and yesterday. Hannah again admitted that he had struck Melvin over the head with a scantling and then placed the boy's "trifling" body in a burlap sack. Hannah had repudiated that story earlier in the day.

Meanwhile, according to reports, Junior Hannah, son of the "troubled" now in custody and often referred to as the famous "boy witness" who withstood police grillings better than did his father, will be questioned again in a hope that he might drop some hint which will lead police to the body.

Junior has admitted that he led Melvin to the Frye garage on the fateful night of December 27, 1928, and then said that he ran away from the scene after his father, Charles Hannah, had pulled Melvin into the garage.

The boy refuses to talk further. Earl Condon, who is also being held in jail in connection with the kidnaping was not questioned Sunday. His attorneys, it is understood, have flatly told authorities that any "third degree" would be a detriment to their case if they filed charges against the man.

Mrs. Vera Ater, of Fredericksburg, where Hannah and his sixteen brothers and sisters were born, said that she was endeavoring to obtain funds to hire attorneys for Hannah. Mrs. Ater is a member of the Hannah clan and a niece of the man, upon whom, authorities say, hinges the solution of the strange Wayne County enigma.

MOB MENACES NEGRO IN JAIL

WILMINGTON, Del., Feb. 24.—A threatening mob of enraged citizens was reported to have surrounded the county jail at Dover today in an effort to secure possession of Theodore Russ, 25-year-old negro, who is charged with assault. Cries of "lynch him" were reported as the angry citizens refused to disperse.

Russ is attracted the wife of his white employer before her two little children near Woodside, Delaware, a few miles from Dover early today and when the husband, aroused by the cries of the children, interfered Russ slashed his throat with a razor, according to the reports.

Russ was captured a short time later and hustled to the Dover jail soon after news of the attacks was circulated.

ONE KILLED, TWO HURT IN AUTO CRASH

LOGAN, O., Feb. 24.—One man is dead and two others are suffering injuries here today as the result of an automobile crash on a wet road.

W. Crane, 40, is the dead man. His wife received a dislocated hip and Clarence Daubenmier, 25, a skull fracture. All were local residents.

Clarence Gleason, 22, driver of the car, was held by police.

IS NOT CANDIDATE

MARTIN L. DAVEY

DAVEY WITHDRAWAL LEAVES WHITE ONLY DEMOCRAT IN FIELD

Pickrel, Peck And Denver
Mentioned For Governor Also

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 24.—Announcement by Martin L. Davey, ex-congressman, former gubernatorial candidate and wealthy Kent tree surgeon, that he would not enter the race for the governorship this year, and the possible effects it will have on the forthcoming election were being discussed with avidity in Ohio political circles today.

Simultaneously with Davey's declaration, came a statement from William G. Pickrel, of Dayton, former lieutenant governor, that he is undecided as to whether he will throw his hat into the ring for the Democratic nomination for governor.

With Davey definitely out of the gubernatorial picture and with the possibility of Pickrel withdrawing, George Whitte, avowed Democratic candidate for governor, former congressman and one-time chairman of the national Democratic committee, is left a clear field.

Two other likely candidates loom on the political horizon, however. One is former U. S. Judge John W. Peck, an ardent Democrat, of Cincinnati, who is said to have the solid backing of the Hamilton County Democratic committee. Ex-congressman Matthew R. Denver, of Wilmington, is also said to be considering requests from friends and western Ohio political leaders that he throw his hat into the ring.

Davey declared that his business would not allow him to seek a political career at this time.

Davey, in his announcement of "I do not choose to run," predicted a Democratic victory during the coming state election.

Prominent figures in politics also construed Davey's statement to mean that he would not enter the U. S. senatorial race, either. Though no Democratic candidates have signified their intentions of seeking the senatorial honors, the names of former Congressman John McSweeney, of Wooster and Chas. V. Triax, former state director of agriculture, are most often mentioned in connection with the race for senator. Former Governor Vic Donahey will not enter the campaign, it is generally believed.

THREE INJURED AS TWO AUTOS COLLIDE

LANCASTER, O., Feb. 24.—Three men are in a local hospital here today as the result of an automobile accident on the Columbus-Lancaster highway at Carroll, about six miles north of here, yesterday. Two automobiles collided head-on, rolled into a ditch and then caught fire.

The men were dragged from the wreckage by passing motorists. David C. Tillman, 26, of Columbus, was hurt so seriously that little hopes are held for his recovery. M. G. Lindsey, 28, and Jacob Halsey, 28, were also injured, but not seriously.

CONGRESS MUST END SPENDTHRIFT WAYS LEADERS INFORMED

Limit Reached Says Executive At White House Breakfast

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—President Hoover assembled the Republican leaders in congress about the White House breakfast table this morning and bluntly told them that the limit has been reached on congressional expenditures—that unless congress draws the purse strings tight for the balance of this session a treasury deficit is in sight which can only spell increased taxes later on.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, assistant Secretary Ogden Mills and Budget Director J. C. Roper, were also present and supported the president's economy plea with facts and figures on the government's present and prospective revenues. These revenues are not going to permit any appropriating by congress outside the budget figures, they warned.

Among the breakfast guests were Senator Watson of Indiana, the senate leader; Senator McNary of Oregon, assistant leader; Senator Jones of Washington, chairman of the senate appropriations committee; Senator Smoot of Utah, chairman of the finance committee; Speaker Nicholas Longworth; Rep. Tilden of Connecticut, the house leader; Rep. Snell of New York, chairman of the rules committee; Rep. Hawley of Oregon, chairman of the ways and means committee, and Walter H. Newton, the president's liaison secretary with congress.

The drain on federal finances occasioned by the farm board appropriations, the public buildings program, and lesser governmental projects coupled with the $160,000,000 tax reduction granted in December and the prospect of reduced revenues from income taxes in March, due to the 1929 stock slump, have combined to make the government's fiscal situation anything but rosy, the legislators were informed.

If congress will refrain from any extraordinary appropriations, other than those already approved and those contained in the huge supply bills, it is probable that the treasury can escape a deficit but not otherwise.

THREE KILLED AS AIRPLANE CRASHES IN BAY

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 24.—Investigation was begun today of the crash of an airplane in Biscayne Bay, in which three persons were killed.

The dead:

M. H. Carlton of Miami, formerly of Watertown, N. Y.

F. J. Somers, chief engineer Miami Aircraft Company.

Thomas B. Ward, pilot.

Carlton went up in the plane as a prospective purchaser. James M. Smooth, president of the Miami Aircraft Company, owner of the plane, had come to the airport prepared to go up in the ship but at the last moment gave his place to Carlton.

SHE EVEN FOOLED THURSTON

CINCINNATI, O., Feb. 24.—The secret marriage of Miss Jane Thurston, 19-year-old daughter of Howard Thurston, the world famous magician, to Harry Harris, of Pittsburgh, son of the late Senator John T. Harris, of that city, is "public property" today. The marriage occurred six weeks ago.

Mrs. Harris takes the part of a singing-dancing comedienne in her father's show, and at the performance Saturday night, she was highly nervous, stumbling over two sets in the show. The news had just been broken to her father.

Thurston gave the couple his blessings. The mother of the girl and wife of the magician had known of the wedding, but it, until Saturday, had remained a closely-guarded secret.

WICKERSHAM PROBE COMMISSION FACES TREMENDOUS TASK

Chairman Says Two Years May Be Needed
To Finish Job

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—It will take the Wickersham law enforcement commission another year and a half, possibly two years, to complete its investigation into the why and wherefores of American lawlessness.

Word to this effect has been given members of congress by Chairman Wickersham himself. It represents his idea of the enormous amount of work still confronting the commission, despite the fact it has already been on the job more than six months and has, reluctantly and under pressure, issued a preliminary report on prohibition which has become the subject of hot debate in congress.

A resolution is now pending in the house judiciary committee to extend the life of the commission for two years, and provide it with a round million dollars.

When this resolution was first broached to Chairman Wickersham he threw up his hands in mock dismay and exclaimed that he didn't want to spend "all of my declining years" in Washington on this work. Nevertheless he has interposed no objections to the resolution, and in subsequent conversations with members of congress indicated that the proposed time period was not far out of line with his own ideas.

There is, however, marked opposition in the house to granting the commission any such life as proposed in the Andrew resolution. A considerable number of members, both wet and dry, feel that the sooner the commission completes its job and goes its way the better.

QUEEN VICTORIA IS SERIOUSLY ILL

LONDON, Feb. 24.—The condition of Queen Victoria of Sweden took another turn for the worse today, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch received from Rome.

Her majesty's condition was so grave, the dispatch stated, that it was necessary to administer oxygen to aid her breathing. King Gustave and other members of the royal family are at the queen's bedside.

The queen has been ill at her villa outside of Rome for some time.

TRAINMAN KILLED

CLEVELAND, O., Feb. 24.—Hurtled into the path of a freight engine when he stumbled against a moving box car while switching trains, Carl Dittman, 34, freight conductor, was instantly killed today.

"SAD-HAPPY" GIRL IS DEAD

Mabel Normand, Screen Actress, Yields To Tuberculosis After Brave Battle

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 24.—The body of Mabel Normand, the late happy girl of the movies, lay here today awaiting plans for the funeral while Hollywood grieved at the loss of one of its best known members.

Death crept into the former screen comedienne's sanitarium ward in Monrovia yesterday and ended her long losing battle against the ravages of tuberculosis.

It was determined several days ago that she had only a few days to live. The heroine of the long-ago flicker films fought gamely on to the last, however, on courage alone.

SCHOOL COMES TO MOUNTAINS

Young Hill-Billies Will Learn To Read And Write Thanks To President Hoover's Aid

CRIGLERSVILLE, Va., Feb. 24.—A school bell rang in Dark Hollow today for the first time in twelve years.

Its peal brought up the mountain-side a picturesque little group of young hill-billies, aged from 6 to 20, in all, about fifteen.

They were going to learn to read and write!

Something the child of the city would say ought to be regarded as a painful duty. But not these young mountaineers. Rather, they were embarking on the most thrilling experience of their brief lives—these children to most of whom Criglersville, the roadside settlement at the base of the mountain, is a teeming metropolis to be visited only on rare occasions.

Faces scrubbed and hair slicked, and wearing their Sunday best, the children of Dark Hollow trudged up the muddy road to the mountain school made possible by the interest of President Hoover. As schools go, it is just a small country school. It cost only $1,100. To the young matriculators, however, it was a mansion of magic and mystery. Not since 1918 has the mountain boasted a school, and that one assuredly did not boast of electric lights, a radio and regulation school equipment.

These children were a portion of the offspring of the six mountain families who live around the summer camp set up last season by President Hoover at the headwaters of the Rapidan high in the Blue Ridge. From 14-year-old Ray Burraker, oldest child of his nearest neighbor, the president learned that Lindbergh was a nonentity and that the light of education had never penetrated the shadows of Dark Hollow. Paw Burraker was called in, the elders were organized into a school committee, the executive dug into his pocket and "la'r'nin'" became an incipient verity among the Rapidan.

Miss Christine Vest, young graduate of Berea College imported from Yosemite, Ky., to impart knowledge to the children, was waiting at the door of the little structure to greet her new charges. There wasn't much ceremony at today's opening. Later, when the roads are more passable, President and Mrs. Hoover will come up and attend a formal dedication.

Today, it was mostly a matter of enrollment and getting acquainted, although in their shy, diffident way most of the "young-uns" already had paid their respects to the "schoolmarm."

It was apparent Miss Vest's task is to be an easy one, at least so far as willingness and co-operation on the part of the class is concerned. Asked, for instance, if he liked teacher, William Burraker, the eight-year-old brother of Ray, bobbed his head with emphasis and said:

"Yes, sirree. Right smart."

The greatest ceremony was the flag-raising. Out front in the clearing, overlooking the vast Piedmont Valley, the menfolk who had erected the school under the supervision of a contractor had set up a flagpole. Saturday they had painted it white as a finishing touch.

And, with the flag flying, the youngsters of Dark Hollow settled down to get a "smack of la'r'nin'."

CRIME WAVE CONTINUES OVER WEEK-END; ROB FOUR PLACES

Investigation of four more robberies reported over the week-end confronted the police department Monday.

Thieves who invaded the J. J. Stout Coal Co., Washington St., either Saturday night or Sunday, obtained $30.68 in change from two tin boxes in a safe which had been left unlocked.

In order to gain entrance, the intruders pried a sliding door at the north end of the building, raised it from the bottom with props and provided an opening through which a boy or a man of small stature could crawl. Nothing in the office was disturbed. The tin boxes which had contained the money were later found discarded on the bank of Shawnee Creek along Home Ave., not far from the coal office.

Robbery of a grocery of which Thomas Teach is proprietor on S. Detroit St., netted $2 or $3 in small change and a number of slips of charge accounts contained in the cash register. Instead of pressing the keys to open the cash drawer, the marauders broke the register to pieces. The glass on the front door was cut enabling the robbers to reach inside and unlock the door.

Thieves who perpetrated two other burglaries in the East End Saturday night carried away cash registers from the places robbed. At a Shell Oil Co. filling station at Main and Columbus Sts., robbers entered the station by shattering the glass in a rear window. The cash register was empty except for a box containing $6 or $7, which was devoted to a fund being collected. This money was taken and the register was subsequently discovered in a creek bed east of a bridge on the Columbus Pike.

An old-fashioned wooden cash register carried away by thieves who visited a barber shop conducted by J. S. Ayers, colored, at 312 E. Main St., was empty except for an open-faced gold watch. The register smashed to small pieces was found Sunday morning by a railroad detective beneath the Monroe St. viaduct, having been thrown off the viaduct to the railroad tracks below. The intruders broke the glass in a door and unlocked the door from the inside to gain entrance.

TIE WATCHMAN AND LOOT SAFE

CLEVELAND, Feb. 24.—Three yegs blew open a safe at the Elysum skating rink here today and escaped with cash loot estimated variously between $4,000 and $5,000 after having bound and gagged the night watchman with adhesive tape.

When Frank Goss, 71, night watchman, failed to "ring in" at his accustomed time this morning, Theodore Nichols, telegraphic alarm officer investigated and found the aged watchman bound to a chair. Goss said the robbers accosted him as he was making the rounds of the building.

Two charges of nitroglycerine were used by the yegs in blowing the safe. The door of the strongbox had been wrested from its hinges by the blast.

Loot from the safe included week end receipts of the skating rink, according to officials of the Elysum.

PASSENGER TRAIN IS HURLED INTO DITCH AFTER HITTING AUTO

Freight Train Also Figures In Crash; Many Injured
Expected To Die; Victims Literally
Ground To Bits

KENOSHA, Wis., Feb. 24.—Eleven persons were ground to death and 118 others were injured, many perhaps fatally, in a double train and automobile wreck, it was revealed today.

Roaring through the night at a speed of more than sixty-five miles an hour, a passenger train of the Chicago, North Shore and Milwaukee Railroad struck an automobile which bounded into the face of an oncoming freight train. Those in the machine were literally ground to bits.

The force of the impact sent five coaches of the passenger train hurtling into a ditch and the freight train careening from the rails.

Those killed almost instantly a few hours to live, according to doctors.

Heavily organized crews made up of nearby residents and railroad workers toiled throughout the night under the gleam of search lights. The tangled debris made it possible to reach many of the prostrate forms.

Crowds of onlookers, who thronged the locality, were dazed by the horror of the scene. So thoroughly was the automobile smashed that no trace of it

PASSPORT FORGERY PLOT DISCLOSED BY SERIES OF ARRESTS

Believe White Slave Plot
Linked With Conspiracy

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—Additional arrests are expected to be made in connection with a gigantic passport forgery plot which may even disclose widespread white slave activities in getting admission to this country of young and attractive Polish girls through the fraudulent papers.

State department officials reluctantly admitted today after disclosure of arrests in Warsaw, Poland, that the fact the ring leaders had already been arrested in New York, that the white slavery angle was still being investigated.

Six persons have been arrested in this country, Morris Baskin, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Leo Shapiro, of Paterson, N. J., are believed to be the ring leaders. A Mrs. Sznieser, of New York, is also under arrest. Officials said she entered the country on a forged passport sold to her by the ring in Poland.

The department has not yet received word as to the number of members of the ring who have been arrested in Warsaw.

According to information received here, one of the men held in Warsaw, said to be a naturalized American citizen, made several trips between New York and Warsaw, each time bringing a Polish girl from the latter city as his wife. A rabbi was bribed to perform the fake marriage ceremony and a Warsaw magistrate persuaded to issue the necessary license in each case.

The forgeries were said by state department officials to be clever imitations as to consular forms, seal, and signatures. Prices obtained by the ring ranged from $500 to $1,500, according to officials. One man arrested at Cherbourg had paid $700 for his passport only to be apprehended, and another at Danzig paid $1,000. The latter was arrested an hour before the ship sailed.

Existence of the plot was discovered about a month ago, it was said. The investigation has been under way by Consul General Felix Cole at Warsaw with the aid of the Polish authorities, and the United States attorney's office at Brooklyn has been working on this end with department of justice agents.

LOOT THREE SAFES

ZANESVILLE, O., Feb. 24.—Fingerprint experts are expected to be called upon by local authorities today to aid in the investigation of three safe-cracking "jobs" here early yesterday, when loot, aggregating $2,000, was stolen from three safes in the Quality Furniture Company. The cracksmen, police say, were evidently professionals.

An electric drill was used by the robbers.

BURNS FATAL TO BOY

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 24.—Burns, which he suffered a month ago when his clothing became ignited from flames of an open gas grate today had caused the death of John Gaskell, aged 7. The lad died in a local hospital yesterday. His body will be sent to Canton for interment.

VIGILANCE SAVES
LIVES OF PAIR

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 24.—The vigilance of Roe F. Montgomery, manager of Alton airport at Columbia, Mo., in scrutinizing every plane that passes overhead today was credited with saving the lives of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hamill.

As Hamill, who is Detroit representative of the American Eagle Aircraft Company of Kansas City, zoomed over the Columbia field on his way from the St. Louis aviation show to Kansas City, Montgomery noticed the plane's right landing wheel was out of line.

Recognizing the American Eagle markings on the wings, Montgomery telephoned the Kansas City airport and reported his observation. An ambulance and chemical fire truck were summoned.

When Hamill's plane appeared over the field, efforts were made to signal to him from the ground but he failed to see the signals and descended. The plane nosed over as it touched the ground and immediately burst into flames. Firemen quickly extinguished the blaze.

Had firemen not been on hand, Mr. and Mrs. Hamill probably would have burned to death because both were strapped in the cockpit. They were uninjured.

MEMBERS OF LUTHER LEAGUE HERE ENJOY SPRINGFIELD MEET

Thirty members and their friends representing the Luther League of the First Lutheran Church, attended a joint devotion of young people's meeting with the Fourth Lutheran Church at Springfield Sunday evening.

The meeting was in charge of Miss Christanna Dutton, Springfield, president of the Fourth Lutheran League. She was ably assisted by two persons representing the Junior Luther League of the Fourth Church who performed such part of the service as the reading the Scripture lesson and song accompaniment.

The Rev. Rudolph G. Schulz, Jr. Columbus, executive secretary of the Ohio Luther Leagues was the principal speaker and gave a detailed narrative of his recent visit to the Lutheran mission fields in the West Indies.

Following the devotional meeting the entire Xenia group and many of the prominent members of the Fourth Lutheran League went to the home of the Rev. Adrian G. Lebold at 359 E. Madison Ave., where a social time was enjoyed during the remainder of the evening. Nearly sixty persons were entertained at the home of the Xenia minister.

Those present from Xenia included: Mr. and Mrs. H. K. Snyder, Sigfried Erlen, Misses Winona and Bernice Deacon, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Mollage and Miss Phyllis, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Nichols, Helen, Evelyn, Thomas, and Ralph Nichols, Misses Alice Gordon, M. J. and Pearl Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Urschell, John Vanderpool, D. W. Gorham, Miss Helen Owens, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fudge and Henrietta, Harold Pennington, Misses Florentine and Mary Elizabeth Mollitor, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Maxwell, Misses Katherine and Mary.

The Rev. Mr. Schulz and Jonas Villaverde, Buenos Aires, Argentina, were present. Others from Springfield who are also known in Xenia and who attended the social function were: Dr. L. H. Larimer, dean of Hama Divinity School of Wittenberg College; Dr. E. G. Howard, pastor of the Fourth Lutheran Church, the Rev. W. H. Nafziger and Dr. J. H. Culler, both former supply pastors for the local church; Mazie Swearingen, president of the Southern Conference of Ohio Luther Leagues; Miss Christina Dutton, president of Fourth Lutheran League and Robert Remberg, vice-president of that organization; Ralph Low, junior executive of Ohio Luther Leagues, and host and hostess of the party, Mr. and Mrs. J. Ross Lebold, parents of the Xenia pastor.

The delegation from Xenia to the joint Luther League devotional meeting in Springfield was the largest group to ever represent the local Lutheran young people's organization in the Clark County seat at any one time during the history of Luther Leagues in this city.

Plans for a similar meeting are now pending with the Luther League of the First Lutheran Church of Urbana.

Unanimously Deemed Great Air Hero of 1929

Second-Lieutenant William A. Matheny received the Cheney award for the year 1929 for "performing an act of valor and self-sacrifice worthy of the highest commendation." Matheny's valorous act occurred at Managua, Nicaragua, when, after bravely landing his burning plane in a jungle, he risked his life and suffered severe burns in effecting the rescue of a comrade.

CHARDON FIREMEN SERVE AS BOUNCERS

CHARDON, O., Feb. 24.—Chardon's fire department recently appeared in a new role—that of "official bouncers."

The fire station adjoins the popular restaurant here of J. U. Wettstein. Wettstein's son, Ed, is driver of the fire truck, and erstwhile baker.

Chardon Fire department members meet twice a week for practice. One of these meetings was in session at the same time that a disgruntled guest chose to have an argument over the payment of his repast.

Sensing great waves of trouble brewing, "Driver" Ed ran to the fire station next door and asked if he could borrow one or two husky firemen for a few minutes.

The entire fire department answered the summons and with an alacrity that would have done credit to a blaze in the business district.

The fire fighters got behind the argumentative customer and pushed. He dropped the money for his meal in his rapid transit out the door.

It will be.

It is pointed out, significantly enough, that if it takes the commission another two years to complete its work its final report will come along late in 1931 or early in 1932, just when the presidential and congressional campaigns are getting under way. Some members don't much relish that prospect, for it would inevitably mean the injection of the prohibition issue, and specifically the Wickersham report itself, into the election. They would much rather see the commission finish its labors and out of Washington before they fare forth for the 1932 battle.

Of the recommendations which the commission made in its preliminary report, only one seems likely of congressional approval at this session. That is the proposal to transfer prohibition enforcement from the treasury to the department of justice. The house has already approved it, and the senate will do likewise when it can clear itself from the tariff jam.

The other principal recommendation, taking away the right of trial by jury for small offenders, seems to be pigeonholed by general consent. It may subsequently be re-rected, but for this session it will be soft-pedalled.

A further grant of power may be requested from congress to enable the commission to subpoena witnesses. Several commissioners have informed members of congress that the commission has been embarrassed in its work by lack of authority to compel testimony.

With the spring and summer primaries approaching, however, it is not likely that the present session will tinker with anything affecting the commission other than to grant the transfer of enforcement to the department of justice.

later described the White House session as "a tightwad breakfast."

"We were told we can't spend any more money," he said.

It was disclosed that there are now pending in congress in one form or another bills which would require expenditure of some $1,600,000 outside of the regular budgetary estimates. These comprise for the most part proposals to increase pensions for Civil War and Spanish War veterans, and to confer additional benefits on World War veterans; rivers and harbors improvements involving some $125,000,000; loans to levee districts in the southern flood region of about $100,000,000; an increase in federal aid to good roads amounting to $50,000,000, and various flood control projects costing in excess of $100,000,000. These are only the larger projects; there are innumerable smaller ones.

"Governmental finances are all right if we stick to the original budget estimates," said Rep. Snell, after the meeting. "Otherwise, we are going to run into deficits and be confronted with the necessity of raising more revenues."

So far as the house is concerned, Representative Tilson said the leadership there would take care of the situation.

"We will stick to the budget, or very close to it," said Tilson.

The budget provides for some measure of relief to World War veterans and for considerable rivers and harbors improvements.

The delay in enactment of the tariff was scarcely touched on, according to those present. The conference dealt almost entirely with the government's fiscal situation.

could be located among the piled up coaches. A motorist who witnessed the sudden tragedy said he saw four passengers in the automobile.

Flames burst from the freight cars and early rescuers worked with only this light to guide them in the search for the trapped victims.

Miraculously, the twisted passenger cars landed upright.

Most of the dead and injured were Chicagoans returning from a week end in Wisconsin. The passenger train left Milwaukee at 10 p. m.

KENOSHA, Wis., Feb. 24.—All the horror of the Kenosha train wreck, from the moment the passenger automobile made its fatal attempt to cross in front of the trains to the dying gasps of the wreck victims, was witnessed by Ray E. Shaw, contractor.

"Through the darkness I saw the light of the freight train which was going north. I started to slow up and suddenly realized that the sedan in front was trying to get across.

"The next moment I saw the passenger, going south. It picked up the automobile with a terrible crash and flung it across in front of the freight.

The passenger train, filled with people whom I could see through the lighted windows, seemed to jurch and then stumble for about 250 yards. Then with a thud it dropped; the time it took to slink into that ditch seemed an eternity. Even then I could see terror in the faces of those poor people.

"There was a blinding flash. I thought they are being burned up alive! But the flash came from the trolley. When there was black darkness, a moment later came another flash, lighting up the whole scene. It was from the freight train that had toppled like children's blocks.

"Again darkness and this time I heard the screams of the persons in the cars, especially those trapped in that first car. Then a third flash, which lasted but a second. This, I believe, was from the gasoline of that automobile."

OLD FREIGHT HOUSE IN CEDARVILLE IS RAZED

BUILT nearly sixty years ago and originally used as the first depot in the village, the old freight house situated west of Main St. in Cedarville was razed by employees of the Pennsylvania Railroad last week.

The railroad company expects to erect an addition to care for an increased volume of freight and the new stock yards will be located on the site of the old building torn down. The new stockyards will be the most modern on the division. The floors will be of cement and the pens and driveways will all be under roof.

Existence of a large number of holes bored in the floor of the old freight house recalled to mind an incident which occurred many years ago when a Cedarville saloon keeper had a shipment of whiskey arrive and left it at the freight depot over night. Rather than break the lock, a few thirsty citizens obtained a large auger and bored many two-inch holes in the floor before they were successful in locating the bottom of a barrel. Once tapped the liquor was drawn through the floor into buckets and tubs and carried away.

Light-weight, lacey tweeds, new weaves in exclusive sports patterns and finely loomed diagonal mixtures all in the new high shades.

But it is not their fabrics alone that give these coats their fresh, spring-like character—it's particularly their designs — which recognize the changes in the modern silhouette and adopt them to the needs of the smart woman.

These models will be presented each day this week during our Spring fashion exposition. For travel or town wear you cannot make a better choice. In misses' and women's sizes 14 to 46; as well as in petite fittings for shorter figures. Every model beautifully Printzess tailored.

Found guilty of a charge of selling liquor, Forman Sanford, colored, Yellow Springs, was fined $100 and costs by Common Pleas Judge R. L. Gowdy, who overruled a motion for a new trial Saturday. The court granted a stay of execution, pending an appeal of the conviction. Sanford, who was arrested in a series of raids conducted by county and state authorities several months ago, was ordered released from custody on bond previously furnished which was ordered continued.

Denial that he was operating an auto fifty-two miles an hour on E. Main St., last Friday in order to test its capacity for speed, was made Monday by G. S. Curtis, mechanic, who was fined $5 and costs in Municipal Court Saturday on a speeding charge. Curtis claimed that he pleaded guilty to driving forty miles an hour but that he explained to the court he did not realize he was going that fast inside the city limits and that he was testing the car not for speed but because the owner said the machine developed a tendency to "shimmy" or wander over the road when traveling about thirty-five miles an hour.

TWO FINED ON LIQUOR CHARGES AFTER AUTO STRIKES PEDESTRIAN

W. A. Stephens, 79, Is Seriously Hurt At Intersection

G. C. Brown, 19, 2020 Hillside Ave., Springfield, driver, and Beryl Lee, 24, same address, occupant, of an auto which ran down and painfully injured W. Alexander Stephens, 79, Charles St., city employee, at Main and Detroit Sts., early Saturday night, were each fined $200 and costs on charges of possessing liquor by Municipal Judge E. Dawson Smith Monday morning. They pleaded guilty.

Stephens suffered a dislocated left shoulder, a dislocated right knee, a painful bruise on the forehead and other lesser injuries when he was knocked down by the car as he was attempting to cross from the south to the north side of W. Main St. at the intersection.

The auto driven by Brown and also occupied by Lee and a woman who gave here name as Miss Mabel Ratliff, 26, Milledgeville, was traveling west on Main St., with the green light and Stephens had reached the middle of the street when the lights on the traffic-regulating signal changed, permitting the traffic to flow on Main St.

Stephens was removed to the office of Dr. Frank M. Chambliss, where his injuries were dressed. Peter Shagin, motorcycle policeman, arrived on the scene shortly afterward in time to see a bottle of liquor tossed from the machine, but the traffic officer mopped up the liquid with his handkerchief and placed the three occupants of the car under arrest.

Patrolman J. E. Craig, who took Stephens to the physician's office and later took him home, said that Brown was in possession of a loaded .32 caliber revolver when he was searched at Police Headquarters. The chamber of the revolver contained three cartridges.

Liquor charges were filed against the two men but the woman was released from custody Saturday night.

City Solicitor W. A. Miller announced that the men will be held in the County Jail unless they arrange to the court's satisfaction compensation for Stephens for the injuries he received.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

I said unto the Lord, Thou art my God: hear the voice of my supplications, O Lord. O God the Lord, the strength of my salvation, thou hast covered my head in the day of battle.—Psalm, cxi. 6.

THE KING'S ENGLISH

Sir Alfred Knox asked in the commons at Westminster "whether in order to protect the English language as spoken by the people of this country the government will take steps to limit the import of American talking films and encourage the production of British films." The government replied that it was not prepared "to place direct restrictions upon the importation of American talking films into this country."

A number of interesting points are raised by this colloquy. In an incipient way American and English are already two different languages and are becoming more different all the time. Are the dangers to which the king's English is exposed in American talkies any greater than those to which it is exposed in German or Scandinavian "talking films?" A language that has had imposed upon it that absurd name for talkies seems to need protection from its friends more than from its transatlantic offshoot. Gresham's law does not run in philology. The genuine idiom of London's east-end need not fear that it will be driven out by the spurious coinage of Hollywood. Americans aren't aping the immaculate diction of George Arliss. The English are no more likely to succumb to our colloquialisms.

We suspect that Sir Alfred's plea, were it robbed of its camouflage, would be found to be a plea to protect the producers of English films rather than their language. We suspect this all the more because Sir Alfred is a Conservative and because his question contains the insinuation that his countrymen can't take a foreign idiom or accent or leave it, as they can their Scotch and soda. They laughed at us for prohibiting the sale of alcoholic beverages above a certain strength. Sir Alfred Knox now asks them to prohibit the importation of the far less intoxicating American talkies! The proposal lacks that heroic ingenueness for which heretofore we have given our overseas cousins unstinted credit.

JAILS IN DECLINE

The number of prisons in England has been cut in half since the beginning of the century. Since 1911, twenty-seven English prisons have been abolished. "We are able to pull down the prisons partly because we have fewer wrongdoers," says the home secretary, "and partly because we keep the people out of such places unless it is absolutely necessary." A few months ago it was reported that the convict population of the Irish Free State had declined almost 50 per cent since the war. There, too, they are pulling down prisons.

While this has been going on in the British Isles, American prisons have had to be multiplied to take care of a steadily increasing criminal population. Are we the only people in the world whose curve of crime must continue to rise, without anything being done about it? When murder menaces life the death penalty is restored. When the Michigan legislature passes a capital punishment bill, a storm of protest is whipped up by sentimental and unreflecting citizens—and the governor bows to it.

The vast size of this country and its subdivision into 48 states, with their different laws and different attitudes toward law enforcement, allow many criminals to slip through the law's fingers, who would get short shrift in Great Britain; but that is merely a contributory cause of the lawlessness in our midst, which could be removed if, as a nation, Americans were imbued with reverence for the law, and determined to enforce it. A far more serious cause of the existing insecurity of life and property is our national disposition to make crimes of acts which in themselves are not criminal. The consequences of this disposition are to lessen respect for all law, to make even the law-abiding regard criminals with greater leniency; and, what is worse, to occupy the police and courts with minor offenses, when they should be dealing with major crime.

What a commentary on the promise that prohibition would empty our jails, that England and Ireland are pulling down their prisons while we, after ten years of prohibition, are unable to build prisons fast enough to keep up with the rising tide of crime; that not a single murder or other serious offense was committed in 1929 in "wet" Windsor, across the river from "dry" Detroit!

The WAY of the WORLD

By GROVE PATTERSON

WHAT IS LEARNING?

Is the A. B. degree with which college graduates are stamped, a mere label on a bootleg bottle? Edward Wilber Berry, dean of Johns Hopkins University, has no degrees. Strange as it may seem he never went to college. Today he is dean of one of America's great universities. According to the American Magazine, Dean Berry has some pretty definite, not to say radical, ideas about education—what it is and what it is not. He says:

"We know that a boy who is going in for science and come to realize that he can get nowhere without a good reading knowledge of French, can acquire it in seven weeks. . . . Yet, we have college students in America who take French three hours a week for years and then have only a fair reading knowledge.

"Many of our most hidebound notions about the curriculum are the results of accidental happenings back in the sixteenth century. . . . What the ordinary curriculum today represents is simply the accumulated debris of the past three or four hundred years of it-or-miss instruction.

"Some of it is plainly superfluous and some of it should be dismissed immediately as the merest flubdub and flappodoodle—inherited rubbish.

"As for the undergraduate. . . . He is the product of a stuffing machine—crammed with facts, with information of a more or less unrelated and useless nature. . . . when he has poured back enough to score his points, he is branded with an A. B.—and put on the market as a bootleg bottle.

"In the end, we may have to recognize the advisability of having three kinds of colleges in America—one for the sons of the rich and well-to-do; . . . another for the drifters, those who don't know what they want; . . . and a third for bright boys."

SWIMMING AND DRIFTING

The drifter may find life pleasant for a time. It is soft and easy to drift, to do nothing which you do not wish to do, to "let everything slide." But when it comes to lasting happiness, to real peace of mind, the struggle up stream produces vastly more than drifting.

CLEVERNESS

Sharp politicians, gentle crafters, smooth crooks, unscrupulous diplomats are frequently called smart and clever. It is a highly inaccurate description. If any of these were really smart they would have discovered that to get results nothing is so productive as simple frankness.

THE QUESTION BOX

CENTRAL PRESS
WASHINGTON BUREAU

Answers to questions of information and fact can be obtained by writing to Central Press Bureau, P. O. Box 126, Washington, D. C., and enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope. No answers will be given to marital, medical or legal questions.

"Please define 'loneal' and explain its use in treating iron and steel," requests a Question Box reader.

The bureau of standards answers "No real was the term proposed some years ago by the American Society for Steel Treating to describe low temperature annealing, but it has not been generally accepted."

Gold and Silver

With gold's value arbitrarily fixed by the government, silver fluctuating and now at half price, why do gold and silver certificates pass current on an equality per dollar?

Gold really fluctuates and is cheap now. That is, it will not buy much; prices are high. In proportion raw silver is still cheaper, but the mint's stamp gives an artificial value to a limited amount of it because it is needed—as a convenience, to make change. The paper certificates are equivalent to metal, only easier to handle.

Counting a Million

Would it be possible for any person, without the use of a machine, to count a million pennies in 17 hours.

Chinese money changers, who count prodigious quantities of silver dollars, consider 200 a minute a stiff average, which would be at the rate of 204,000 in 17 hours, if it could be maintained. Maybe pennies would move faster, but a million sounds like a lot.

Dams Take Time

Government engineers have been surveying the Kentucky river between Monterey and Frankfort with a view to a flood control dam. Will the government build it? If so, where, how high and when?

There will have to be a report by the engineers, many references, long consideration, congressional authorization and money appropriated, all of which will take a long time; maybe years.

Electrostatic

After a telephone's removal from a house, leaving wire ends, a crackling could be heard from them during a cold wind, with snow and fire seemed to leap into the room. Why?

The bureau of standards says "It seems certain that the phenomenon was electrostatic, the weather conditions being most favorable to a charge's accumulation on the wires, possibly resulting from impinging snow particles. Discharge sparks may well have been visible."

NEW YORK—Longacre Lil tells me she never reads a lease.

"What difference does it make what you sign these days," she says, "if you have a good lawyer?"

"HUMAN NATURE"

A motorist, with his arm circling the shoulders of a great big perox-eyed Juno, was arrested for swinging past three traffic lights.

In court he said: "That wasn't reckless driving, Yeronder; it was human nature."

The magistrate sighed drearily and suspended sentence.

SAD PLIGHT

They yanked a college bred gent out of the Social Register the other day and threw him into Sing Sing. He was convicted of stealing $25,000 from a widow whose estate had been entrusted to him to manage. The sad story of his "downfall," as rehearsed by his high-priced lawyers, had the entire courtroom in tears.

He began to steal 25 years ago to take care of his wife. Then his wife died, and he went on stealing to hold his place in the Social Register. After a while he got married again, dragged a couple of kids into the world, and, of course, had to increase his speculations to provide for them.

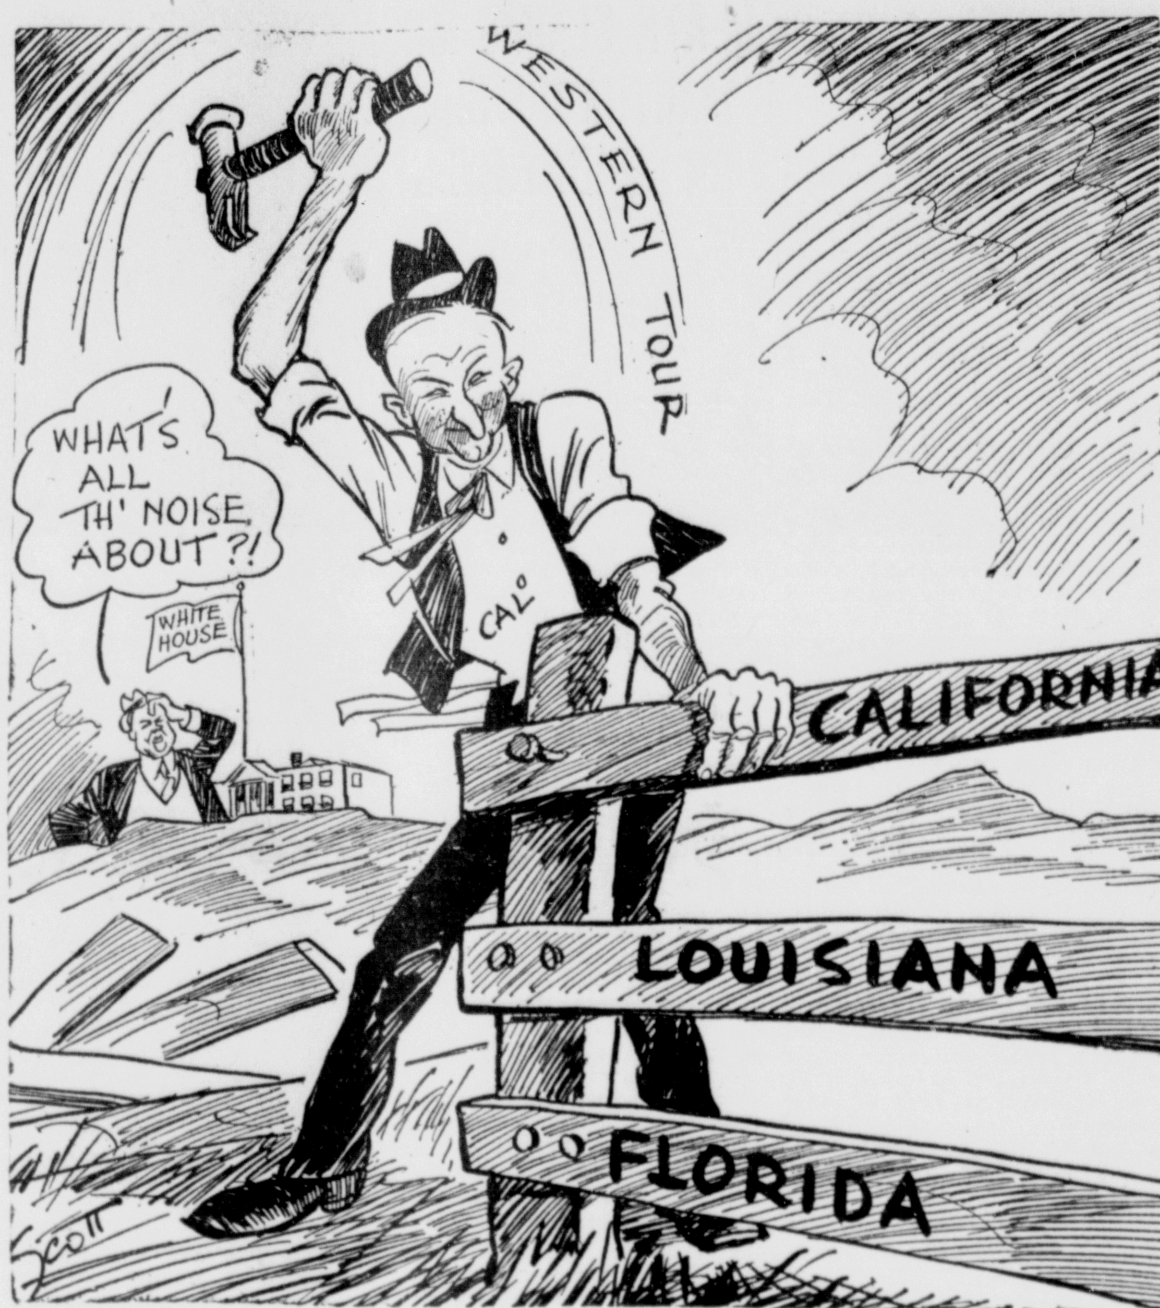

If our courts are going to have their attention diverted from Hell's Kitchen to Park Avenue, in a little while this country won't be a fit place for a gentleman to live.

POLITICAL FENCES?

CONTRAST IN IOWA'S SENATORS EVIDENT AS STECK TOSSES HAT

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON—Senator Daniel F. Steck, whose term expires in March, 1931, has announced his candidacy to succeed himself.

Which focuses one's attention upon Senator Steck long enough to reflect for a fleeting moment what an extraordinary contrast he presents to Senator Smith W. Brookhart, his Iowa colleague in the upper house of congress.

If two utterly dissimilar individuals ever did represent the same state at the same time in the United States senate, two such individuals represent Iowa now in the persons of Dan Steck and Smith W. Brookhart.

In fact, the contrast is so violent that ordinarily one fails to see it. Brookhart stands out so vehemently that he throws Steck into complete obscurity. A Sioux brave in full war paint, screaming his battlecry, would not attract much notice in competition with Colonel Brookhart in action in the senate.

And Steck is not even as noticeable as a Sioux brave in full war paint. Inasmuch as he never says anything, that there is any Senator Senator Daniel F. Steck, from Iowa.

THE mere circumstance that Steck calls himself a Democrat and that Brookhart calls himself a Republican (the regular Republicans froth at the mouth and turn purple every time he does so, but he certainly isn't anything but a Democrat) is a minor detail.

Several states have mixed Republican and Democratic representation in the senate.

The Democratic party is more of a curiosity from Iowa, however, than he would be from any other states. Normally Iowa is so persistently Republican by such heavy majorities that Steck is the first Democrat it has conferred a toga on since ante civil war days.

THE truth is, it looked doubtful for a while if the Hawkeye folk had meant to send Steck himself to Washington.

The count of votes in 1924 showed a majority for Brookhart, who was Dan's opponent that year, but a mixup concerning the marking of a lot of the ballots led to a contest and Steck won it. It may have been only a coincidence that the senate election committee consisted mainly of conservative Republicans, who preferred Steck's kind of a Democrat to Brookhart's brand of Republicanism.

There evidently was considerable ill feeling over it. Because, when Brookhart really was elected two years later, it was duly noted that Steck failed to chaperon him as he took the oath of office, according to custom. Senator Hubert D. Stephens of Mississippi did it. I never could learn whether Brookhart refused to stand for Steck or Steck refused to stand for Brookhart, but it looked awful.

DEMOCRATS who profess progressive principles, elsewhere in the country, express small sympathy for the Iowa Democrats' almost uninterrupted hard luck at the polls during so many decades.

The progressive Democrats say that every time the Iowa Democrats do stand half a chance, they put up some Bourbon whose political ideas antedated Noah, and (declare the progressives) serves them right to be walloped as long as they keep that up.

Maybe Steck's presence in the senate should be interpreted as indicating that the Hawkeye Democrats varied their usual program in his instance. Or maybe a highly conservative senate committee's decision in his favor, in his contest with Brookhart, should be interpreted as indicating just the contrary.

THE senate's thought unquestionably is that Iowa surely went the limit both times when it sent Steck and Brookhart to Washington. That is not so surprising; any state may go the limit.

What stumps most of Steck's and Brookhart's fellow senators is: How the dickens did the Iowa voters happen to go first the conservative limit and then the radical limit in such rapid succession?

BREAKFAST
Fruit Cup, Grapefruit and Orange
Oatmeal with Bran Cream
Toast

LUNCHEON

Savory Rice String Beans
Cabbage Apple Salad
Whole Wheat or Rye Bread
Warm Ginger Bread Milk

DINNER

Meat Loaf Baked Potatoes
Celery Corn Pudding
Baked Apple with Whipped Cream
Lemon Cookies

This is a good substantial meal for a family of four. No fancy dishes, but fairly balanced combinations.

Today's Recipes

Meat Loaf—Two cups ground beef (a little pork improves it), one-half cup minced onion, one teaspoon salt, two tablespoons flour, one cup strained tomatoes (canned tomato soup may be used), one-half cup bread or cracker crumbs or oat flakes. If all beef is used, add a little melted bacon fat or butter. Mix well and bake one hour.

Savory Rice—One cup boiled rice, two tablespoons butter (or beef suet), four tablespoons chopped cooked carrots, three tablespoons grated cheese, one chopped hard-boiled egg, milk or cream. Melt the butter (or suet) and brown slightly. Add the rice, carrots, cheese and egg. Moisten with milk or cream and season well. Heap on a buttered dish and brown in the oven.

Corn Pudding—Either dried or canned corn may be used. If the former, it should be soaked and cooked in the regular way. Corn left over from a former meal may be prepared in this way. To two cups corn allow two eggs, four tablespoons flour, one-half teaspoon salt, one tablespoon butter, one cup milk, one tablespoon sugar, pepper if desired. Melt butter, blend in flour, add milk and stir until mixture reaches boiling point. Add sugar to egg yolks, beat slightly, then stir into white sauce. Add corn, salt and pepper. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites, pour into buttered baking dish or casserole, and bake in a moderate oven until a golden brown. Serve at once.

Suggestions

How to Prepare Sweetbreads Wash immediately and soak in cold water for one hour. Drain. Place in boiling water to which one tablespoon of lemon juice is added. Boil five minutes. Drain and put in cold water, where it will become firm again. Remove fibers. No matter how the sweetbreads are to be prepared, this process must first be followed—and it really isn't as troublesome as it sounds. The simplest way to cook them, and wholesome enough for anyone, is to broil them.

Peter's Adventures

By Mrs. Florence Smith Vincent

A BAD MISUNDERSTANDING

For some reason or other—and Peter could not have told you why—he did not like the looks of these fellows at all. They had cruel faces and their expressions struck him as crafty. He said as much to Dragon-Fly. And for a wonder, Dragon-Fly did not contradict him.

"Odd that you should have noticed it, young Human, and you a stranger to our land and our ways. Promise not to tell if I tell you a secret? Well we insects are not at all fond of the Army Worms. As a rule, whenever they pass through a field that field is stripped bare of its grass. They have come to 'show off' today and let's hope they will leave without doing the crops harm. Do you see that field of wheat yonder? Well, when the worms are in it, every bit of green from the tops. It would wring your heart to see a field of oats or barley after they have passed through it!"

"I have heard the Humans talking it over," continued Dragon-Fly. "And since what is food for the Two-Legs is food for the field folk, too, I am sorry to hear the bad news and in Dragon-Fly language I tried to sympathize with them. But your folks do not understand the tongue I speak and so I guess they never knew I was sorry for what the Army Worms had done to their crops."

A tear fell from Dragon-Fly's eye. Peter saw it glitter on the ground. Quickly he turned to the flyer.

"What in the world is the matter?" asked he. Dragon-Fly sighed loudly.

"No, the Humans do not understand poor Dragon-Fly!" said he. "Ah me! Well I remember once flying to whisper my sympathy into a Two-Leg's ear. And believe it or not, that Two-Legs raised his hand and dealt me a blow that knocked me to the ground. It was some time before I came to and could rise into the air. As I lay at his feet I heard that Human say: 'That pesky Dragon-Fly! Oh dear me! I was hurt and so were my feelings.'"

Diet and Health

By LULU HUNT PETERS, M. D.
Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet for Children"

Underweight

"Dear Doctor: I have written you so many times but you have not answered me. Please answer me this time.

"I am 29 years old, 5 feet 6 inches tall, and can't gain an ounce over 110. I am very much underweight, you see. I would like to know if hard work has anything to do with keeping me so thin. I keep house for four persons, do all the washing, cleaning and cooking. I have a very poor appetite. I have been examined by several physicians and I am organically sound."

"MRS. SKINNY."

It seems to me I write a good deal of underweight, Mrs. Skinny! I know I do not write on it so much as on overweight for I don't get one-hundredth the number of requests to do so, as I do on overweight! nor is it so common or dangerous as overweight—although extreme underweight does lower the resistance and does make the afflicted one more nervous and unstable. I suppose you thought you were not answered, because your initials weren't used?

As I have told you all before, when you see an article pertaining to the subject you ask about, even though your initials are not appended, take that as an answer for you, also. If I were to answer each question on any one subject, the column would not be of general interest, you see (and it would require many columns to do this, too).

Yes, hard work uses up a great many energy units (calories), and if you have a poor appetite there is no doubt but that you are not getting half enough to take care of that work and your other physical activities. It must be remembered that the thin person needs considerably more food than the one of the same height and activities who is well padded, for the reason that, having no padding, he loses a great deal of heat, and any extra food is used up to furnish this heat instead of being deposited as fat.

Now, Mrs. S., you have gradually got to increase your calories until you are taking 1000 C. a day more than you need, and theoretically and practically you will gain one-quarter of a pound a day on this, or approximately two pounds a week, just as the overweighter, by doing the reverse, will lose the same amount. Remember that the 1000 C. must be more than you need for heat and energy for your physical activities.

If you had an examination and were found organically sound, we can safely say that your chief procedure now to gain is to eat more and rest more. Can't you take a rest period an hour a day? It is probably better to have five or six meals a day than to make the three meals much larger all at once. You should have some nourishing drinks, such as egg nogs, chocolate, or milk and cream, half and half, between meals. Gradually increase your cream, nuts, cereals, including bread and butter in your meals. Better take some cod liver oil also—one tablespoonful of that amounts to 100 C. You should take that amount for the vitamins A and D. Then it would be wise to take some vitavase, or yeast, or yeast extracts, for supplemental vitamin B, the appetite-stimulating vitamin.

I go into the subject of gaining and losing weight a little more extensively in our pamphlet on the subject. Please send for that. (See column rules.)

Miss F.—We have an article on Acne, which you may have. See column rules.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Peters cannot diagnose nor give personal advice. Your questions, if of general interest, will be answered in the column in their turn. Requests for articles or pamphlets on hand must be accompanied by a fully self-addressed, stamped envelope, plus the following "mail charge to help cover cost of printing and handling: for each article wanted, two cents in coin; for each pamphlet ten cents in coin. The pamphlets are Reducing and Gaining, Hygiene of Women, Kidney and Bladder Disorders. Address Dr. Peters, in care of this paper. Write legibly, and not over 200 words.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

It's a pathetic thing to see a young person—or an old one, either, for that matter—loving another who is unworthy. Love seems to take no account of character. Sterilizing qualities gain admiration, but there must be something else in a person's personality to call forth love.

A girl or boy often can clearly see that the one they are wild about can bring them no happiness. All their relations with this person are highly colored, feverish, restless, but the fascination holds, and the enthralled one feels that life holds no happiness for them unless the charmer is theirs.

A school girl writes me that she loves a young man somewhat older who goes with a fast crowd and whose actions are reprehensible. At a party to which he escorted her he neglected her for a girl whose reputation was bad, and left her to go home alone. He has never apologized, and yet she loves him. Although she knows he spends a good share of his time with this girl, he was planning to get my correspondent a ring for her coming birthday, which was to be an engagement ring. She wants to know what she shall do, as she can't forget him, and do I think he still cares.

TRIXY: I am glad you wrote to me when your heart was full, dear, and hope you had a good night's sleep after it. It is often a great relief just to write your feelings down on paper. It relieves the tension. Do it whenever you feel it will help. That is what I am for.

You know in your heart that a boy who would act as he has acted would hardly make a satisfactory fiancé, but I know just how lovable such scamps can be. Don't try to "forget" him, but keep that clear little brain of yours in charge, even when your heart rebels. Go quietly on with your school work, interest yourself in all your usual activities and let things work out as they may.

He probably does care for you deep in his heart, and respects you, too, but is physically attracted to this other girl. I hope he will gradually cease to have any charm for you. The "catch of the town" is not always a desirable match.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I've read such good advice you have given to others, so I'm coming to you for advice. I was married when I was 19 and only lived with my husband a little over a year. He left one day and I haven't seen him since. That has been four years ago. I haven't tried to get a divorce from him because I hate the idea of all the red tape one has to go through with. Do you think it is harmful for me to go to shows and dances with others without my divorce? I haven't seen any other man that I would care to marry. That is another reason I've never tried for divorce.

"Is it unlawful for me to receive mail by my maiden name?"

"PUZZLED" No, it is not unlawful to get mail in your maiden name. Many women use their maiden names nowadays because they are in business under that name. It is not wrong for you to go out with others under the circumstances, but I think it would be much more comfortable to secure a divorce and be legally free. It's much like having a minor surgical operation. One dreads it and puts it off as long as possible, but once made up one's mind to have it done one goes through with it and feels much better.

Better Love Than Riches

When one has to choose between love and luxury most people would advise taking love. Love spreads a glamour over all the makeshifts of poverty, making them seem like luxuries. But gold and silver lose their luster when the heart is hungry for a loved presence.

But even love will have hard siding when it is combined with poverty, hard work and ill health. A comfortable home with money enough to take life easy looks good to a girl whose health is failing and who must keep right on working even if she marries the boy she loves.

BIG BILL HOSKET AND HIS MATES ROMP THROUGH 33-11 VICTORY

Xenia Basketeers Play Hard But Are Badly Out-classed By State Champions In Battle Saturday day At Fairgrounds Coliseum

By PHIL FRAME

HEY call the state champion Dayton Stivers basketball team the Orange Crusher and the nickname is no misnomer.

Stivers, living up to its nickname as well as its justly famous reputation, demonstrated to the satisfaction of even the most ardent Xenia fans, its powerful strength by drubbing Xenia Central High basketeers, 33 to 11 in a walkaway victory Saturday afternoon at the Fairgrounds coliseum in Dayton.

In tripling the score on the Bucs the Stivers machine started off slowly but gathered momentum by leaps and bounds and indicated a most intimate acquaintance with the various phases of technique peculiar to the indoor sport.

At no stage of the game, with the possible exception of the first and last quarters, did Xenia even make things interesting for the champions.

For the second time this season the physical superiority of a giant center placed Xenia at a distinct disadvantage. Big Bill Hosket, all-state-center, standing six feet, four inches in his stocking feet, and wearing an expression that indicated he was bored with the entire proceedings, was the linchpin of the Stivers attack.

The Bucs were utterly unable to cope with his tremendous reach coupled with his deadly underhanded shooting and the towering youth personally accounted for thirteen points.

Xenia scored the first two points of the game on a difficult basket by Birch Bell, but it was only a few seconds until Hosket the mighty, had batted in two fielders and Armbruster had sunk a long shot, giving Stivers a 6 to 2 lead when the opening period closed.

From then on Stivers knocked all the interest out of the game. Thereafter so airtight was the Stivers defense that Xenia could connect

WILBERFORCE WINS ROUGH BATTLE FROM WEST VIRGINIANS

Crisp Sparkles In Attack Of Winners On Friday

In a game replete with fouls and roughing, the Wilberforce University quintet defeated West Virginia State College 27 to 14, Friday evening in Beacom gym.

Gibbs started the scoring for Wilberforce in the first minute of play when he sank a long one from the middle of the floor. A foul by Clark Willett registered the first point for West Virginia at the beginning of the game.

West Virginia's lone marker until the last five minutes of the first half. The half ended 18-6 favor of Wilberforce.

The second half opened up rough, the going getting tougher with Lucas and Gibbs dropping shots with monotonous regularity. Clark for Wilberforce and Giles for West Virginia were ejected from the game on personal fouls.

With five minutes to play and the score 26-14, Coach Graves went in every reserve on the squad.

West Virginia was able to hold them to one extra point. Wilberforce's passing combination was only excelled by its guarding. Crisp was high man for Wilberforce with seven points and Willett for West Virginia with nine points. Lineups:

TWO BOYS KILLED WHEN CAVE FALLS IN

LAS CRUCES, N. M., Feb. 24.—Buried alive beneath five feet of sand and silt when a cave they were digging fell in, two eleven-year-old boys—Harry Lee King and William Stillwell—died here today.

A third companion barely escaped a similar death by smothering when only his head remained above the fallen dirt. A smaller boy who had been watching the three ran for help, but the lads were dead when physicians examined them.

The boys had tunneled about two and a half feet into a twelve foot embankment when the cave-in occurred.

CHAPTER XLIII

To use a sporting phrase, it was a "solar plexus wallop" that none of the quartette had been looking for. It hurt. If Maxwell had removed the securities he must have done it that very day. And that would indicate he was already aware of Pat's having found and taken Jimmy out of his clutches. It meant, too, that he would be hunting cover, getting out from under—and getting out with all the money! Yes, indeed, matters looked ominous.

Dallard's brain worked fast as he considered the situation. Again he addressed the cool young Frenchman.

"Do you know where the securities are now?" he asked, getting to his point on the jump.

"I do," the young man answered in a manner just as terse as that employed by the other. "Although Maxwell doesn't know I know!"

Dr. Gordon, looking on and listening attentively, wondered vaguely how Rex was going to handle the affair now. For it seemed to the doctor that the face of the situation had taken on a distinctly new aspect. The sum of $100,000 didn't appear to be half as absurd now as it had been a few moments before. He glanced at Dallard and noted that Rex was looking closely at Pat. He seemed to be trying to convey some thought, some idea, to her by mental telepathy. And just as though she had caught and understood that unspoken thought Pat now spoke.

"Don't you think, Rex?" she began and then stopped, while her gaze rested on each one of her friends in turn. After a moment she continued. "Don't you all think that, as Mr. Bouchard has knowledge exceedingly valuable to us and we don't want to give Maxwell any chance to get away, it would be best to give him the sum he has named? It seems to me that if Maxwell has already removed those securities he must know that I have found Jimmy. So, don't you all think it would be best to pay the sum named and get the matter settled? What do you think, Rex?" she asked again, looking at the lieutenant.

Rex Dallard's ideas, as a matter of fact, during the brief period between Bouchard's last statement and Pat's query, had done a sort of "reverse English" stunt, a mental flip-flop, so to speak. When Jean Bouchard had calmly announced that $100,000 was his notion of a proper sized sum for his help it had appeared ridiculous to Rex. Immediately upon learning that an injunction was impossible without the young Frenchman's aid, the sum of $100,000 then seemed to him as it seemed to the doctor, and evidently to Pat—a figure not at all absurd. To give up $100,000 to save fourteen million was good common sense, as nothing less. Wherefore Rex said:

"Under the circumstances, perhaps, it might be advisable to pay the young man the sum he has named. But not until he has earned it. When the securities, now in Maxwell's possession, are back with those of Pat's, then, and not until then should Bouchard be paid. Is that satisfactory?" he asked, looking hard at the young man.

"Perfectly satisfactory, monsieur," replied Jean Bouchard, and he added with something that smacked of his countrymen's natural gallantry. "Miss Blair's word is as good to me as a certified check for that sum! And I would rather have the $100,000 from her than the million I could force Maxwell to give me now since her brother is restored to her! You know I am speaking the truth in saying that he would pay a million to keep me quiet!"

What they didn't know—or at least what they failed to say and every one, including Bouchard to take into consideration that night was the character, the diabolical cunning of Maxwell and the likelihood that he might be watching the young man who had been his tool. It seemed strange afterward to all of them that no one had given a thought to the very obvious probability that if Max would pay a million, as they all had agreed he would do, to keep Bouchard quiet, he would pay a gunman a thousand to bring about the same result, or a gangster five hundred to put the young man away for a few months.

But no such eventually occurred to one of them that night. The minds of all, save that of poor Jimmy, who sat between Pat and Margery, one of his hands in Pat's most of the time, were on the plans under discussion. It was decided that all of them should meet in Dallard's and the doctor's apartment in the house near Gramercy Park at 1:00 p. m. on the following day. Dallard would arrange to have Marks, the lawyer, there. The first thing to be done, of course, was to obtain an injunction against further removal of the securities from where Maxwell had last placed them. That place, Jean Bouchard would reveal on the morrow.

"Do you know where the securities are now?"

Pat and Margery had arrived at the rendezvous considerably before noon, having left Jimmy in the care of Lucy Ping and Aunt Lottie. They had eaten an early luncheon with Rex and Frank and the lawyer, Marks, at the cafeteria in the basement of the house, it was 1:20 p. m. Madame Leclerc and Jean Bouchard were twenty minutes late. At that moment the telephone rang. Rex answered the call.

It was the Austrian woman inquiring if Jean Bouchard, by any chance, was there or if they had received any word from him. She had waited, she told Rex after he had answered her question, at the drugstore, where Jean and she had arranged to meet, until long after the time agreed upon. Then she had telephoned one of the chambermaids at the apartment house, where Bouchard and Maxwell had rooms. Jean had arranged with the girl to receive telephone calls coming to him. The maid had told her, Madame Leclerc said, that Jean had not slept in his bed and had not been in his room, she was sure, since he had gone out on the previous night. Was it likely, asked Madame, that Maxwell had become aware of Jean's call, with her, on Miss Blair's night before, and being suspicious, had hired some thug to put the young man out of the way?

She, Madame Leclerc, had seen Jean last in the taxicab in which they had returned from Miss Lynne's home. When she left the cab at the curb in front of her hotel, she said, Jean, she knew, had intended going straight to his room. But something had happened to prevent him from reaching that room. Did Monsieur Dallard suppose that Maxwell was responsible for Jean's failure to return to his room and to keep the appointment he had made for that day?

To which Dallard replied: "I haven't the slightest doubt, Madame, but what Maxwell is responsible for Bouchard's failure to show up here today. But wait just a moment—remain where you are!"

He placed the telephone on the table, covered the mouthpiece with the palm of his hand and turning to the four interested listeners in the room, outlined in brief, that which the woman had just told him.

"The question we must now decide—and decide quickly," he continued, "is whether Bouchard has met with some sort of foul play at the hands of Maxwell—been kidnapped or blackjacked by some bird like that roughneck that black-jacked Margery, or—is this Jean Bouchard still working in Maxwell's interests? To me it looks like foul play—that Bouchard was watched last night, and after parting with the Madame in front of her hotel, was followed, and either blackjacked or kidnapped. In either case it would be Maxwell back of it. I'll tell Madame to come right over here and we'll try and get a correct line on the matter."

He turned back to the table, picked up the telephone and spoke into the mouthpiece. The response came instantly in the vibrant tones of an impatient woman.

"Yes, yes, monsieur! But why do you keep me waiting so long? What do you advise me to do? Surely you must know how anxious I—"

"I know, I know!" cut in Rex, swiftly. "We're all anxious, but—"

CEDARVILLE WELL FAILS TO PRODUCE SUFFICIENT WATER

Because the specifications call for a flow of 125 gallons a minute for four hours or longer if the village council requires, a water well for the Cedarville municipal water system, which was tested last week at a depth of 107 feet, did not prove to have the necessary capacity as only twenty-five gallons could be obtained. The water stood within five feet of the top but when lowered did not rise fast enough.

Installation of the new water system is expected to start soon and as representative of the Pittsburgh-Des Moines Steel Co., contractors, has already been arranging preliminary details. The steel for the tank structure and also the pipe will be shipped at once.

The Pittsburgh company, which has the contract for connection of the O. S. and S. O. Home water supply with the Xenia municipal water system, has also started work on this project.

The Theater

With reports that William Fox has settled his financial difficulties the prophesied success of Grandeur film, the film by which motion pictures are projected in much larger proportions on a huge stage-wide screen, may put him to the front in the movie field.

"Happy Days", the new Fox picture, is being shown with Grandeur film at the Roxie Theater, New York, now, and it is reported that the effects may be as far-reaching as the introduction of sound. Plans are under way to put Grandeur projection machines in Philadelphia, Washington, St. Louis and Detroit theaters and on the west coast.

All enlarged pictures publicly shown heretofore, with the exception of "Fox Movietone Pictures of 1929" at the Gaiety Theater last September, have involved no new mechanical principles and have consisted of nothing more than the substitution of an ordinary lens which has given a magnified view. The magnified lens was used in an ordinary motion picture projection machine.

Grandeur, however, involves a complete system starting with the cameras, special panoramic lenses and new projectors which are revolutionary. The projectors represent ten years of continuous development and an outlay of several hundred thousand dollars. The projectors are made by the International Projector Co.

Grandeur eliminates close-ups

and has many technical advantages which give this method of showing motion pictures a unique attraction and charm. In spite of the tremendous size of the picture, there is no distortion. People sitting close to the screen or in sections of the theater from where they view the picture at an angle, may enjoy the tremendously enlarged view with absolutely no perceptible distortion.

Lupe Velez, "Whoopie Lupe" of the films, will be guest artist on the Paul Whiteman-Old Gold radio four Tuesday evening from 9 to 10 p. m. E. S. T. over a chain including WKRG, Cincinnati. The dazzling Mexican beauty will sing "Caribbean Love Song", featuring long in her all-time "Hell Harbor", which she has just completed in Tampa, Fla.

Two of the most popular talking films shown here recently were "Sweetie" and "So This Is College", both college pictures, which seem to refute the complaint, made to Will H. Hays, film czar, by Prof. Edwin H. Paget of North Carolina State College.

The Hays office reveals that Prof. Paget could not carry his own precinct as the Technician, student paper of North Carolina State College, says: "We like the collegiate movie". The paper points out that the pictures misrepresent college life because it is the unusual rather than the drab, customary events that are interesting. All films dealing with college life have been, in the main, written, directed and acted by college men and women. Of 647 executives in the movie industry, 61.3 per cent are college trained. Truth of this statement is borne out by the fact that Elliott Nugent, who wrote the dialogue and played the stellar role in "So This is College" is a former Ohio State University boy, who also wrote "The Poor Nut."

CORD CORPORATION IS PLANNING MASS PLANE PRODUCTION

CHICAGO, Feb. 24.—Details are expected shortly in Chicago, from officials of the Cord Corporation, of one of the most ambitious programs yet attempted in mass production of airplanes.

Manufacturing in quantity of cabin planes, at prices within the reach of the average business and professional man is indicated in the new alignment within the industry of two of the youngest corporation presidents in the field, E. L. Cord, president of the Cord Corporation, Auburn Automobile Company and other officials of other subsidiaries of the Cord Corporation, and Edward A. Stinson, president of the Stinson Aircraft Corporation, of Detroit.

Purchase by Cord Corporation of the controlling interest in Stinson Aircraft indicates the throwing of the $50,000,000 assets and the extensive factory facilities of the Cord interests, one of the important units in the automobile industry, behind the making of airplanes on a large scale basis.

Orders already have been received by Lycoming Manufacturing Company for the first group of motors for the new planes, and officials of the Beech Aviation Corporation announced receipt from the new combination of the largest order ever given them for airplane parts and instruments.

Specifications of the new planes are expected to be revealed shortly, along with details of the marketing system to be employed.

Stinson and Cord are two of the most picturesque and vital figures in the American automobile and aviation industries.

Edith Stinson is known as the dean of pilots and one of the world's foremost designers. With 14,000 hours in the air, he has flown more miles and trained more pilots than any other aviator. He is estimated to have flown 1,500,000 miles with yearly flights totaling more than 70,000 miles, and has flown more than 400 different types of planes. He is the only man who ever held two flight endurance records and the first to come out of a tailspin alive.

Stinson was one of America's first flyers. He built a successful glider, with his brothers' aid, in 1904, at the age of ten, in his home town of Fort Payne, Alabama. At fifteen he had perfected a glider that would carry 300 feet. But not satisfied, he set off, with only an eighth grade education, for Memphis, where he stayed a short time and then went to St. Louis where he heard, two men were building a plane.

At St. Louis Stinson helped build the plane which, when completed, flew at a height of fifty feet for a short duration. Still he was not satisfied, and he went to Dayton where he entered the Wright brothers school. Then he became known as one of the most daring pilots.

Stinson was in charge of student flying at Kelly Field during the World War, and no flyer ever left for overseas without Stinson's "o.k." on his ability. Stinson also was appointed one of a committee of three to choose the best type of student training planes.

Stinson established a factory at Dayton after the war and later went to Detroit where the Detroit-Stinson Company was founded three years ago and which now has become one of the world's largest builders of cabin planes.

Entrance of Cord to the field of aviation is heralded as a sensation. Only thirty-five years old, he has been one of the most meteoric of figures in his recent rise in the automobile industry.

Cord left Los Angeles ten years ago, where he had been re-building used Fords and selling them to Los Angeles young blood. He arrived in Chicago with $45 in his pocket and no job in sight. At twenty-eight he was making a name for himself as an automobile distributor and at thirty was vice-president and general manager of the Auburn Automobile Company.

Now Cord is chairman of the board of president of each of a group of corporations with combined assets of $50,000,000.

Like Stinson, Cord is a pioneer, and his career in the automotive industry has been featured by constant innovations both in design and engineering principles.

Loses Treasure Chest

Telling stories rivaling those of Captain Kidd for glamor and adventure, Ernie Longbrake, Ogden, Utah, airplane pilot, above, has returned from a flight to Mexico with Al Jennings, now a film actor, where they sought buried gold bullion worth $11,000,000. Longbrake says the treasure was located and part of it removed when the party was driven away by Yaqui Indians, armed with modern rifles.

SINKING OF "RIO DE JANEIRO" REMAINS MYSTERY OF SEAS

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 22.—The gods grinned in high glee that fateful morning twenty-nine years ago this month.

And because they did, the palatial Panama Mail steamer Rio de Janeiro became a marine coffin for 127 persons and a million dollar cargo of gold bullion!

The big ship was completing its long voyage from the Orient. It had crossed the Pacific in safety. Passengers and crew looked forward to landing within a few hours and greeting friends and relatives that would await at the pier.

So it was nothing that the Finger of Fate that struck the Rio de Janeiro, smashing it against a rock off Port Point, as it neared its way through a heavy fog, at the Golden Gate.

It sank. A few passengers, a few members of the crew, escaped. Of the others, no trace ever has been found. The accident occurred February 22, 1901.

From that date until now the ship's disappearance has baffled all marine men. Swift currents lash their paths through the Golden Gate. It is possible the ship's hull was whirled out to sea. The wreck may have become buried in mud or swept beneath a sheltering ledge.

These matters have been argued for nearly thirty years. The answer is undisclosed.

Sinking of the Rio de Janeiro was recalled when engineers making borings for the Golden Gate bridge felt a drill suddenly strike metal. William Reed, noted diver, thought the metal was from the Rio de Janeiro. The theory was disproved, however, in the light of subsequent discoveries.

The region in and about glamorous San Francisco bay since the days of the early explorers has been rich in stories of ships.

History of the "Hell Ship" City of Sydney was brought again from the misty lore of her younger days when it was burned a few days ago on the beach below Visitation valley. In a spectacular blaze, her spars and decks were swept away. Her hull will be cut up for scrap iron.

The City of Sydney was built in 1875 in Philadelphia. It was first operated in the Pacific Mail steamship company's service to the Orient, carrying passengers and freight.

Anchored off Sausalito in May, 1925, preparing for that which was to have been her last voyage, the City of Sydney lost numerous of its seamen. They escaped from the vessel to tell vivid and wild tales about dope orgies, booze parties, and many other kinds of vice.

FORM JUNIOR CHOIR AT FIRST LUTHERAN CHURCH RECENTLY

Realizing an urgent need for singing leadership in the Sunday School of the First Lutheran Church, a junior choir was recently organized under the direction of Miss Mary Maxwell, 111 Stelton Road. Miss Maxwell is one of the contralto soloists in the regular Lutheran choir and is interested in the development of a song leadership group for the Sunday School. Several weeks ago a general in-itation was extended to Sunday School scholars, not in the regular choir, to get together to form an organization. The group held two weekly practices in order to present a special program when the Rev. Rudolph G. Schulz, Jr., Columbus, executive secretary of the Ohio Luther League, should be present. From now on the junior choir will practice each week at the church Fridays at 4 p. m.

Membership in the organization is not closed. The present group includes: Dorothy Molitor, Louise White, Margery and Nellie Randall, Pearl and May Davis, Kenneth Jones and Ralph Nichols. Mrs. C. F. Mellage and Miss Katherine Maxwell accompanied the choir during its special program Sunday.

National Farm Outlook

By ARTHUR H. JENKINS,
Editor, The Farm Journal
Written for Central Press

The establishment of a "stabilization corporation" for wheat and grain in general, marks a defeat, or at least a disappointment, for the Federal Farm board.

The Farm board has been hanging back on this, for a number of reasons, the most important of which is that the board would like to be itself more firmly established, and get its plans of action more thoroughly worked out, before embarking on this uncharted sea.

The stabilization corporation is indeed the great what-is-it of the marketing act. The nearest thing to it in our history is the U. S. Grain corporation that functioned during the World War, and which wound up its affairs, if I recall correctly, with a profit of $50,000,000. At all events, with a big profit.

But the Farm board has been hanging back, and it has taken the heaviest kind of pressure from political and other sources, plus the failure of wheat prices to hold up to what the board considered a proper level, to induce them to agree to the setting up of a stabilization corporation for grain.

Meantime, it may be well to try to place the stabilization corporation in its relation to other parts of the marketing machine that we are trying to build up.

There is, first, the Farm board. This body aids, advises, encourages and has half a billion dollars in cash to lend.

Next come the co-operatives, which are organizations of farmers, or in the case of the big national co-operative agencies, are federations of the smaller co-operatives. These sell farm products—though the wheat co-operative has recently been buying wheat on a small scale.

Next is the advisory committee, which does just what the name indicates—advises the Farm board of conditions in the particular farm industry it represents, and makes recommendations.

Last comes the stabilization corporation, which buys as well as sells, stores the commodity, wheat or whatever it is, buys or sells in the futures markets—in a word, operates in the open markets in whatever way seems likely to get the best prices for farmers. For its operations, it may borrow from the half-billion fund of the Farm board. The new wheat corporation has a credit of $10,000,000 to begin with. It is supposed to operate in emergencies and it does not have to show a profit.

The last is the kind of powerful body the Farm board has just set up. It is totally new and totally untried. We are going to see agricultural history made in the next twelve months.

LONGING PREVAILS FOR THE SPIRITUAL MINISTER ASSERTS

"Despite the great amount of materialism prevalent in the present day, there is still a longing for the spiritual; for spiritual power," declared the Rev. Rudolph G. Schulz, Jr., Columbus, executive secretary of the Luther League of Ohio, in a sermon delivered at the First Lutheran Church here Sunday morning.

The Rev. Mr. Schulz returned recently from a three weeks vacation trip to the West Indies where he visited the Lutheran mission fields in the interests of the Ohio Luther League. He described a part of his journey before members of the Lutheran Sunday School.

"The growth of peculiar cults and sects, the result of misdirected efforts, gives evidence that many are on the quest for spiritual power," continued the minister. "There are two factors that hinder man in his quest. One is a lack of the proper conception of spiritual power. A second is our failure to recognize the degree to which the spiritual power is available. If our soul, like the soul of the psalmist, cries out 'for the living God' we ought to remember that such a cry need not go unanswered."

Three persons were inducted into the church membership by the Rev. Adrian G. Lebold, pastor of the local Lutheran congregation during the morning service.
